

Customs declaration for 200G SD-WAN device

Article Overview

A 200G SD-WAN device imported into the EU or Germany must be declared via an electronic customs declaration, typically using CN23 or ATLAS systems, with duties and VAT applied based on its commercial value.

Key Requirements

1. Type of Declaration For commercial shipments like a 200G SD-WAN device, an electronic customs declaration is required. In Germany, this is usually done through the ATLAS system or the Internet-Zollanmeldung (IZA) for postal and courier consignments . The standard declaration type 'A' should be selected, and the customs office where the goods are presented must be specified . 2. Value Thresholds

- If the device's value exceeds 150 euros, a full electronic customs declaration is mandatory .

- For shipments under 150 euros, a simplified declaration (IPK) may be used, but this does not apply to excise goods or items subject to restrictions . 3. Required Information The declaration must include:

- Name and contact details of the declarant or representative
- EORI number if the declarant is an economic operator
- Description, quantity, and value of the SD-WAN device
- Harmonized System (HS) code for electronic networking equipment
