

External Distribution Box Price

Article Overview

External distribution boxes typically range from €20 for small residential units to several hundred euros for large, weather-resistant GRP enclosures.

Residential Plastic Distribution Boxes

For small domestic applications, plastic external distribution boxes are available on platforms like Amazon. For example, the POLY POOL PP0291 rectangular electrical distributor, made of flame-retardant thermoplastic and suitable for wall mounting, is priced around €20–€40 depending on the seller and shipping options (Amazon Germany) . These units are compact, lightweight, and ideal for single-phase residential circuits.

GRP (Glass Reinforced Polyester) Outdoor Enclosures

For more robust outdoor installations, GRP cabinets offer superior durability, corrosion resistance, and weatherproofing. Prices for these units vary widely based on size, IP rating, and customization. Small wall-mounted GRP boxes may start around €100–€150, while larger floor-standing or walk-in enclosures can cost €500–€2,000 or more . These enclosures are suitable for commercial, industrial, or utility applications, protecting transformers, switchgear, and feeder pillars.

Factors Affecting Cost

- Material: Plastic boxes are cheaper, while GRP or metal enclosures are more expensive due to durability and weather resistance .
- Size and Capacity: Larger boxes with higher amperage or multiple circuits cost more .
