

Fiber optic cable laying costs more than one meter

Article Overview

The cost of laying fiber optic cable typically ranges from $0.60 to $5.00 per meter, depending on cable type, installation environment, and additional labor or equipment requirements.

Typical Price Ranges

- Indoor single-mode fiber (SMF): $0.60–$1.50 per meter, depending on cable quality and termination density .
- Outdoor or armored deployments: $2.00–$5.00 per meter, especially for longer runs requiring conduit, protective hardware, and splicing .
- Material-only costs: Single-mode fiber generally costs $1–$6 per foot ($3.28–$19.68 per meter) retail, while multi-mode fiber is slightly cheaper, with wholesale bulk prices ranging from $0.09–$1.52 per foot ($0.30–$4.99 per meter), .

Factors Affecting Cost

- Fiber Type and Count: Single-mode fiber is more expensive than multi-mode, and higher strand counts increase material and labor costs .
- Installation Method: Underground trenching is costlier than aerial deployment due to labor, equipment, and pavement restoration requirements. Aerial runs can reduce costs by 20–40% .
- Cable Construction: Armored cables, outdoor-rated jackets, and specialized connectors add to the per-meter price .
